Dear

I have received your letter to which you attached a copy of the Readers Digest article "KGB: The Swallows Nest." Thank you for your views on United States intelligence efforts and for bringing this important matter to my attention. I have contacted appropriate government agencies to obtain answers to your questions.

As you may know intelligence agencies do not make public statements about their activities. They are bound by law to protect the sources and methods by which they obtain their information.

Realizing your interest in the matter, I am enclosing three articles relating to the role intelligence plays in serving the needs of our government.
